[Abigail Chicken: Within our project, we work closely with community centres, primary schools, areas across the north east like that, to tailor our courses towards the type of learners. Whether the learners come from different types of background, whether they have different types of educational needs, we try and tailor our courses best to them, in a way that's going to make them learn in a way that is suitable and is best for them.

We try and make sure that the information that we are giving is information that the learners already have basic awareness of and we are just developing that awareness on things like food labelling, how to produce a balanced but also cost effective meal for not only our learners but for within their family structure as well.
